IN THE BRITISH TRENCHES ALONG THE AISNE.

The defensive works of the Allies rival those of the Germans in the excellence of their construction, and the whole countryside has been likened to a great rabbit warren. Everything possible is done to relieve the tedium of the long wait during which the troops seldom see the enemy, but are subjected to his shells. The British soldiers have been able to enjoy a game of football and amuse themselves in the trenches with cards and dominos, reading newspapers and writing letters.

Drawn by R. Caton Woodville from a sketch by a British officer. Copyrighted, 1914, by The Sun Printing and Publishing Association by special arrangement with the Illustrated London News.
